HUNDREDS DESTROYED.

THE SUBURBS OF ST. PAUL CUT UP BY A CYCLONE.

The Rival Cities Escape but Their Suburbs Suffer Badly—Some Fine Stock Yards Completely Demolished and Their Contents Slaughtered by the Winds.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 14.—Minneapolis and St. Paul, almost by a miracle, escaped the severe effects of a cyclone late yesterday afternoon. A funnel formed four miles northwest of Minneapolis, and first went to the ground, but only for a moment, near the Twin city stock yards. No serious damage is reported, and from there it rebounded and came to the ground five miles further east and rebounded again, and struck in the vicinity of Kohlman Lake, seven miles from St. Paul, with an intensity that was terrific. At this time the top of the funnel as seen from the high buildings in this city seemed fully two miles in circumference. At Kohlman lake six people are dead, five missing and nine wounded. At Little Canada, also near St. Paul, there are some lives lost, but how many is not known. The cyclone cut a swath 200 yards wide, levelling everything before it. The damage to property is great, but not yet estimated. Large trees were broken like straws and carried hundreds of yards, and six houses were blown bodily into the lake. All the inmates of one house were killed, and hundreds of heads of stock were destroyed. Some very valuable stock farms lay in the path of the storm. Later advices indicate that at least 20 persons were killed at Kohlman Lake and perhaps as many more at Little Canada. It is reported that 25 lives have been lost at Colman's Lake, 20 to 30 at Little Canada, and 20 at Joanna Lake by the cyclone. The damage to property is also extensive. The news was brought by passengers arriving by the train from the region affected. They say no news was obtainable from White Bear Lake, where there are many excursionists. If the cyclone reached that point it must have caused great loss of life there.

The Journal's Redwing special says: It is now quite probable that there are yet 50 or 60 people missing in addition to the list identified. It is thought that all these are in the wreck which lies off the point near Lake City. The undertaking establishments are crowded with friends and several cases of prostration have occurred. Business is completely at a standstill. John Terkin and wife and five children, comprising the entire family, are among the dead. It is reported this morning that Redmen is drowned together with the entire family. They went down wrapped in each others arms and were picked up last night floating together in the embrace of death. The scenes at the morgue are simply indiscribable.

A Poor Marksman.

NEW YORK, July 14.—A special from Asbury Park, N. J., says: Asbury Hurley, aged 22, attempted to blow his brains out this evening because Miss Delia Veschten refused to elope with him. Fortunately Hurley's aim was not steady enough to hit the mark, so he will have an opportunity to try his luck again. Miss Veschten has been staying at Saratoga house when Hurley called this afternoon Miss Vichten soon discovered that he had been drinking. The youthful lover proposed that they go off and get married. This proposition was promptly refused and Harley drew his revolver and fired three times at his head without hitting. He was placed under arrest.

Terrible Tale of Crime.

BOSTON, July 14.—At daylight to-day Superintendent Cornish of the Pinkerton detective agency, arrested at Arrowhouse, near Newton Junction, N. H., "Canadian women, Leda" Lemontague, about 20 years of age, on a charge of arson. A few years ago she married Napoleon Michaell in Woliston, Quebec. Not long after their marriage the husband charged his wife with improper relations with her own brother, Remi Lemontague, and on the night of July 19, 1888, the brother Remi came to the house bringing a bottle of whisky. The wife admitted him and they all drank of the liquor. Remi left the house for a few minutes and on his return his sister again admitted him. As soon as he entered the house he opened fire on Michael, shooting him in several places, and afterwards cut his throat. The brother and sister placed the body of the supposed dead man on a mattress and set fire to the house and ran away. The dying man, aroused by the fire, succeeded in crawling through the window and reaching the house of a neighbor named Bouche. The woman sought shelter in the house of another neighbor. Later she went to the house of Bouche not knowing that her husband was also there. Bouche suspected her and set officers on her track. She was arrested and acquitted. She fled before a new indictment charging her with arson could be prepared. After her arrest in New Hampshire she was brought to Boston.

Two Blocks Swept by Fire.

REDDING, Cala., July 14.—A fire broke out at 11 o'clock last night in the rear of Willards & Weil's store, consuming the buildings along the west side of Market from Tehama to Butte streets, and also all the buildings on the east side of Market street from Tehama to Butte streets, including Jno. Craddock's livery stables on Butte street. The cause of the fire is unknown but is is supposed to be the work of an incendiary. Owing to the poor water supply property was burned that could have easily been saved had water been furnished to work with. Following are the losses as near as can be determined: Willard & Weil, loss about $10,000, insurance about $8,000; J. G. Farbner, loss $5,000, insurance $2,500; M. A. Mitchell, loss $1,500, insurance $1,000; F. Thompson, loss $1,500, insurance $600; Jno. Chaddock, loss $25,000, insurance $15,000; Martin Parker, loss $2,000, insurance $1,000; Merrill Bros., loss $7,000, insurance $3,500; scattering and unknown, loss $3,000, insurance unknown.

Cold Blooded Killing.

NEW YORK, July 14.—The Herald's City of Mexico special says: J. Neil Adams, American, killed Carlos Larque, a waiter at the National Theatre restaurant at one o'clock to-day by shooting him in the head and heart, in presence of fully fifty Americans. The affair was so cold blooded tha all those present cried, "lynch him." Adams, who was drunk became incensed because the waiter would not wait on him and shot him twice; either bullet would have proved fatal. Adams is employed by a photographing firm. The American colony is indignant at the unjustifiable murder.

General Fremont's Funeral.

NEW YORK, July 14.—The funeral of the late General John C. Fremont will take place Wednesday morning next at 10 o'clock, from St. Ignatius Church in west Fourth street. The services will be conducted by the Rev. Dr. Arthur Ritble the pastor. The list of pallbearers has not been prepared nor any other details arranged.

There will be eight pallbearers, four of whom have been already selected. Gen. Wm. T. Sherman, Gen. O. Howard, Admiral Brainear and Col. Floyd Clarkson. The other four will be from the old organization (pioneers) of the territorial days of California, of which Gen. Fremont at one time was president. The services will be in accordance with the rights of the Episcopal church.

The Fremont and Dayton Central Union, a Republican organization of this city, formed in 1856, sent the following dispatch to Mrs. J. H. Fremont of Los Angeles: "Accept the sympathy the old guard of 1856. Future poets and historians will surely honor Fremont." (Signed) B. F. MOMERO, GEORGE F. EDGAR.

Silver Bill Passed.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—The president approved of the silver bill at 8 p. m.

SPORTING NOTES.

Brief Resume of Sporting Matters Here and Elsewhere.

The sports on the hill Saturday afternoon were well patronized, cricket, lacrosse and bicycling, making a good programme. The wheelmen made a good showing, and their races were very interesting. The first one was a half mile dash for ordinaries. Jenns, Scott, Minor and Christie got away to a good start, and a close race ensued, Minor winning, with Jenns and Scott tie for second place, Christie making a close third. Jones and Lindley on safeties was the much talked of event. Rosh got away well together, and quick time was made. Lindley held the lead until within a hundred yards of the finish, when the up grade proved too much for him and Jones came in winner by about 15 yards. The next event, ordinaries vs. safeties, was a good race, Tideman, the youngest member of the club, was given a 100 yards start on his Brantford safety. Godson on his Rudge safety wheel was scratch, with Scott and Jenns on ordinaries. The race was very close at the finish. Tideman, coming in leader by a few feet, Scott second, with Godson and Jenns tie for third. Godson did well to keep with the high wheels and it shows that the Rudge is a good racer. The open safety race was abandoned, and a mile heat between Christie and Creech was run instead of it. The result was a dead heat. Next Saturday if the weather is good other races will be given.

A wrestling match between John Sugget and Harry Moss will take place in the Nanaimo Opera House, on July 17th.

CRICKET.

The match between the Victoria club and the Lawn Tennis club was won by the latter with 95 runs to spare.

The Beresfords also had their first match, facing an eleven from the Champion. The play was good, and the Beresfords scored a victory against their naval opponents by ten runs.

A cricket match was played last Thursday afternoon in the canteen ground, Esquimalt, between blue jacket teams from H. M. ships Champion and Amphion, but owing to the wet weather only one innings was played, the scores being Champion 45, Amphion 35. In the evening the teams met at the Esquimalt hotel where a sumptuous repast was provided for them by Mr. J. Day, proprietor. After the usual toasts had been given the health and prosperity of the genial host (late messman of the Amphion) was proposed by the chairman, Mr. Mark Wallis, J. G. I., which was drunk with acclamation. Mr. Day having replied, song by various members of the company followed, and after spending a most enjoyable evening, the party broke up shortly after midnight.

LACROSSE.

The great match of Vancouver vs. Westminster, played at the latter city on Saturday, was won by the Westminster men after a hard struggle, they obtaining four straight games.

BASEBALL.

The east and west sides of Langley streets are to have another match shortly.

The shoemakers of Vancouver have challenged the printers of that city to a match of baseball for a barrel of oatmeal and a barrel of flour for St. Luke's Home.

A return baseball match between James Bay nine and Nanaimo will take place next Saturday on the Nanaimo cricket ground.

Every effort has been made by the amateurs to get the Tacoma league to play here on Tuesday. The boys were willing to play for nothing and allow the visitors the whole of the gate receipts after paying expenses, but the Tacomas wanted a larger guarantee than was considered profitable for a game in the middle of the week, and on such short notice. There will therefore be no game to-morrow, but as the Spokane league team will be coming this way shortly, it is hoped that a game will be arranged with them.

HOME AND FOREIGN.

HON. E. BLAKE NARROWLY ESCAPES BEING BLOWN UP.

O'Donovan Rossa Will Return to Ireland—Parnell's Unpopularity Among the Irish Members of Parliament—American Species of Messenger Boys in London.

LONDON, July 14.—It is commonly believed that a serious split in the Irish party will result from Parnell's speech in the House last Friday. The speech was far too moderate and conciliatory to the Tories to find favor with such violent spirits as Dillon or O'Brien and their followers. It is generally wished that Parnell would retire from the leadership of the party, as his attitude is not in accord with the majority.

Gilbert to Emigrate.

LONDON, July 14.—Gilbert, author of Pinafore, etc., is about to sell his beautiful house at Kensington and intends to live abroad in future.

Prayers for Fine Weather.

LONDON, July 14.—Great fears prevail all over the country that the harvest will be a total failure, and the Archbishop of Canterbury has ordered prayers for fine weather to be offered in all the churches.

Messenger Call Boys.

LONDON, July 14.—In the Royal Institute, Piccadilly, Saturday night, a singularly interesting exhibition was given of the advantages and working of the American district messenger system, which has just been introduced into this country. By means of the messenger call boys, the police, physicians, firemen or cabs may be summoned in a very few moments. In Saturday's exhibition there were many scientists and prominent practical men and women present, among whom were conspicuous the Duke of Abercorn, who formmally opened the exhibition with an admirable speech, made into a large phonograph, which was presented to the meeting by Col. Gourald. In this speech the duke strongly urged the value of the electric call system and advocated its hearty support by the citizens of London. Among the others present were the Earl of Mount Edgecombe, Lady Mount Edgecombe, Lady Beatrice Anson, Marquis Hamilton and goodly number of Americans.

They Wouldn't Let Him Speak.

PARIS, July 14.—To-day being at once the anniversary of the fall of the bastile and centenary of the federation, the double occasion is being even more than usual enthusiasm. Boulangist deputy Mery attempted to address a large crowd of paraders in Place de la Concorde and was promptly arrested.

FIRE AT WESTMINSTER.

Sully & Bryson's New Carriage Factory and Other Buildings Reduced to Ashes.

NEW WESTMINSTER, July 14.—At 2.30 o'clock this morning a fire broke out in a small cabin near the Merchants hotel. An alarm was at once given and the fire brigade with apparatus was on the scene in short order. The flames, however, by this time had made considerable headway and before they were got under control, Sully & Brysons new carriage factory, and a stable and eight cabins, the property of Mrs. Dr. Black, were reduced to ruins. The carriage factory was valued at $2000 with a stock valued at $2000, making a total of $4000 nearly covered with insurance.

BLAKE'S CLOSE CALL.

The Boiler of a Steam Yacht Explodes—Narrow Escape.

MONTREAL, July 9.—A tourist party composed of Hon. Samuel Blake, Toronto; Geo. T. Brown, insurance agent, and Edward Cronin, both of London, arrived to-day after escaping from a serious accident. The party left Toronto on Monday in a steam yacht for Muray Bay, where they intended spending the summer, and experienced very heavy weather. Opposite Gananoque yesterday the boiler exploded and the yacht took fire. The party was rescued by a tug attracted by the sound of the explosion when a mile distant. Mr. Blake only was slightly burned.

STANLEY'S MARRIAGE.

Princely Nuptials—Gorgeous Scene in the Abbey—Royal Presents.

LONDON, July 12.—Westminster Abbey has never contained a more distinguished assemblage than that which eagerly took advantage of the opportunity to-day of witnessing the marriage of the most popular hero of the time, and one of the loveliest and brightest women of England. Stanley's unfortunate and serious illness served to lend an additional interest to the occasion and fringed with something of pathos an event full of joyous realization and happy promise.

All London felt the stir of the occasion, and only when some event of royal importance is on the tapis does popular interest become so manifest as it was to-day. The streets in the vicinity of Westminster Abbey were crowded from an early hour. There were hundreds of enterprising vendors of flowers and wedding favors, photographs of Stanley and his bride, histories of the happy couple and other appropriate articles, all of which found a ready sale. A reasonable part of the large building was set apart for such of the general public as by dint of early arrival and superior pushing powers, could take advantage of the privileges. The greater part of the space however, was devoted to the fortunate invited guests.

Among the notables were several Cabinet ministers, lords, members of parliament and envoys of royal academicians, men famous all over the world as leaders in science, art and literature, and women of as high fame. All social leaders seemed to be there, and the display of beautiful gowns, rich jewels and grand artistic decorations has not been surpassed since the royal functions of the jubilee celebration. The Abbey seemed to be one great floral bower, so numerous were the flowers and rare plants bestowed at every available point. As the best known and most popular guests appeared and passed down the aisles, they were greeted with cheers. Gladstone and his still handsome and regal-looking wife, received a subdued ovation.

The bridal party appeared promptly at the appointed hour, and their arrival was the signal for an immense outburst of applause. Stanley was pale, and his suffering and weakness were apparent to all, but he walked firmly, leaning slightly on the arm of his best man, Count Daroth, of Belgium, to the chancel where he sat down and awaited the bride. Then music burst forth as the bride appeared leaning on the arm of her brother, Mr. Charles Coombe-Tennant and walked up the aisle amid applause and a chorus of admiring comments. She was attired in a handsome costume of satin and corded silk, with train embroidered with pearls, and she had a bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley. She presented a fine appearance; but a strict regard for facts would impel the observation that her beauty has been greatly exaggerated by writers who have told her praises as uncommittingly since the announcement of her engagement to the famous explorer. She is moderately handsome and about 36. Stanley arose as she approached and received her gracefully, immediately resuming his seat while she stood beside him. Archdeacon Farrar at once began the service; the Bishop of Ripon performed the marriage; the Dean of Westminster blessed the couple, and Vice-Chancellor Butler, of Trinity, Cambridge, addressed them. The bride showed much emotion, her eyes filled with tears as she made the responses. Stanley was unmoved. The responses "I do," "I will," were firmly spoken by both, and were audible to all. The service lasted forty minutes and was not perceptibly curtailed on account of Stanley's illness.

The wedding procession then reformed. Stanley leaned on his wife's arm and also on a cane, and he seemed to walk with more pain than when he entered. They proceeded to the Jerusalem chamber, where Mr. Gladstone, Sir Frederick Leighton, Sir Wm. McKinnon, the Baroness Burdett-Coutts and Mr. Stanley's African comrades signed the marriage register as witnesses. The party afterwards went away through the eager and demonstrative throng to their carriage and quickly departed. The bridal carriage was covered with flowers thrown by the spectators. The bride and groom, with their friends, were driven at once to Richmond Terrace, where a reception was held in the immense grounds.

The numerous costly and beautiful presents received by the bride and groom were inspected with much interest by the guests. Included in the display were 25 gold caskets containing the freedom of as many important cities, a superb silver dinner service of 246 pieces, the gift of the Emin relief committee, and an ebony and silver screen, containing photographs of members of the expedition, presented jointly by them; an American shield mounted on a silver pedestal, inwrought with Cupids, and hundreds of other unique and and valuable tributes, including, of course, the magnificent diamond necklace presented by the Queen to the bride, with Her Majesty's likeness in pendant. There were also three interesting souvenirs presented by Mr. Emin's agent, Col. Gouru, in the shape of the phonograph's record of the musical programme during the wedding. One phonograph was placed in the choir to record the anthems; another caught the wedding march from the organ, and a third recorded the chimes in the belfry. After the reception, Mr. and and Mrs. Stanley, accompanied by Dr. Parkes, departed for Melchett park, on the borders of the New Forest of Hampshire, which Lady Ashburton had placed at their disposal for the honeymoon. Afterwards they will go to the Tennant's country seat in Wales.

FROM THE CAPITAL.

Columbia Timber Limits.

OTTAWA, July 14.—John White, comptroller of the mounted police, has left for River du Loup to see the Premier, and will afterwards proceed to Manitoba and the Northwest, where it is understood he will investigate the charges preferred against Herchmer, the commander of the police. It will be remembered that Davin and others have in the press during the last two sessions of Parliament preferred charges against Herchmer. Sir John promised to get a departmental commission to enquire into it, and White was appointed to do so.

Tenders were opened to-day at the Interior Department for timber limits in British Columbia. There were some forty in all. A Winnipeg gentleman wired on Saturday that he had forwarded a tender, but as it will not arrive till to-morrow it will be too late.

Crushed to Death.

While the people of Winnipeg were enjoying the Orangemen's procession on Saturday, one of the saddest events that it has ever been the lot of the TIMES to publish happened to the family of a former prominent Victorian. Mr. J. B. Ferguson, Mrs. Ferguson and her two little girls were watching the procession, when a team of horses took fright at a flag and dashed into them. Edith a bright little girl of 8 years was knocked down before she could get out of the way and was killed instantly. The family is well and favorably known in this city, where they lived for many years and where Mr. Ferguson's mother lives. The little girl was a great favorite among her acquaintances in this city, who will hear with horror of the terrible accident that has overtaken her.

DREAMING AND HOPE.

The rosy wings of fancy
Are folded now in rest,
And hope has hushed her dreaming
To sleep within my breast.

And cold and cruel reason
Has whispered unto me—
If hope and fancy vanish
What life would surely be.

If dreams be dead, no matter,
If hope should linger still,
Sweet peace will fan her pinions
And soften every ill.

But if the hope should perish,
And slip from life away,
A cloudy day this life, then,
With morn and eve of gray.

With no bright sun at noontime
To pierce the heavy pall,
To brighten with its glowing
The shadows over all.

And life would be undoated,
A living but to be:
Existence in all phases
A mere necessity.

Then wake, my sleeping fancy,
And hope awake to smile,
And slumber not forever,
But soothe my life awhile.

Sweet fancy, plume your pinions
To soar the rosy sea,
Fly forth, O blessed hoping,
And bring my joys to me.

THE FREED PRISONER.

"I consider it the only hope for him, judge," said the doctor.

"It will establish a bad precedent. The prisoners will think all they have to do is to get sick so as to get free," said the judge, testily.

"It is but a question of time, and a very short time, too, before a greater judge even than you will give him his discharge, and not only him, but a good many others besides," said the doctor, much provoked.

"Eh, is that so?" said the judge, ignoring sarcasm, "is there really so much disease in the jail?"

"A good deal, and chiefly confined to the United States prisoners. Spotted fever rages with fatal effect among them."

"That is strange. How do you account for it? Is illicit distilling an unhealthy occupation?"

"When it reaches its natural result of landing the operator into jail, there to sicken, it may be called decidedly unhealthy. But, jesting aside, these mountain fellows suffer more than the other prisoners for the reason that they have always lived a free life in the open air; therefore the close confinement of the jail proves very irksome and they sicken under it. This spotted fever is, I think, the result of lack of proper circulation of the blood. It is a sort of epidemic among the mountaineers. Some of them have died of it and others are very low, and they will die too, if they stay in that jail. The thought of going home is all that will save them now—Jack Bigby, especially; release is the only hope for him."

"He has no one to thank but himself," said the judge. "Why did he meddle with illicit distilling?"

"I grant all you say; but death is a severe sentence for a few gallons of mountain dew," said the doctor.

"True," said the judge after a pause. "I will suspend sentence in his case, and let him go home. Here is his release," said he, as he filled out a blank; "take it to him—a new sort of physic, truly! But tell him he won't get off so easy the next time he meddles with the revenue."

"Thanks," said the doctor as he took the paper. "It will be many a day, if ever, before he will feel like playing with edged tools. Judge, this is the first time I ever envied your high position—when I see the mercy you can show."

"Is the sun a-shinin' outside, Pa?"

* * * * * * *

The sick man lay on his bunk in his cell; his fever scorched tongue was stiff and blackened so that he could scarcely speak. It was difficult to recognize in the wan shadow lying there the stalwart mountaineer of a few months ago. His blue eyes were sunk deep in his head, his matted hair and beard were bleached from a sunburnt yellow to a sickly straw color, and over the hollow caverns of his cheeks the white skin, blanched by prison damp, was tightly drawn. On its bloodless surface the red blotches of the spotted fever showed with startling vividness.

Could this be Jack Bigby, the man who could outshoot, outride, outjump and outdance any of his comrades?

Old Bigby, otherwise Pap, as he sat by the bedside of his sick son, felt dazed and stunned by the change. He had only arrived that morning, and, in the few hours that had passed, failed yet to realize it. Could that be Jack? He was changed in his ways as well as in his looks. How strange he talked!

"Set whar I kain see ye, Pap," he said, when his father had arrived. "The sight of ye is good fer sore eyes."

And, as he said it, all at once the father had choked up and felt like crying; he didn't know why. But he hadn't none it.

"Hit war powerful cur'ous. Jes' ter think o' Jack a-sayin' sech a thing! Reckon an' ready Jack ter wanter lay thar an' look at his ole pap!"

Mr. Bigby, it is true, was not a very righteous object, nor one on which most people would crave to feast their eyes. He looked as if the summer sun had shone upon him very hot and the winter rain had beat upon him very hard. He could, in fact, be called weather beaten. His long, iron gray hair and beard were guiltless of barber or comb and brush either, for that matter. The seams and rugged lines of his face caused his countenance to look like a bit of rolling landscape. But all seamed and rugged as it was, to the homesick eyes of his son it was more beautiful than the face of Adonis.

Mountaineers are not emotional people, and so old Bigby sat there, his throat swelling queerly under the strange gaze of his son. Mingled with his emotion was a feeling of wonder and horror at his changed appearance.

"His hands," thought the father, "air lik'a chicken claws!" Could that pale, shadowy thing be Jack's muscular fist?

"Is the sun shinin' outside, pap?" asked Jack, for his father's presence had brightened up his cell.

"Yes, I reckon hit's a-shinin' right smart, but hit's so dim in hyar, ye kaint see hit."

"Hit air dim in hyar allus," said the prisoner, "tell fer a leetle taste o' sunshine, 'pears like I'd perish."

"Ye'll git better now," said the father, taking the invalid's thin hand in his brown, horny one, and awkwardly stroking it. "Why, yer hand," said he by way of a joke, "is so thin an' white hit looks ceenamos' like a streak o' light."

"I 'low I looks like a afternoon shadder, anyhow," said the invalid, feebly. "I kaint hold out much longer."

"Yer mouth's dry, honey," said the anxious father, unconsciously going back to his childhood's way of speaking to him. "Hyar, let pap gin ye a leetle sup o' water ter wet it."

But the prisoner closed his eyes and slightly shook his head.

"Jest a drap," coaxed the father; "jes the matter o' a drap, Jackie, honey."

"Not thet thar water," said the prisoner rousing up. "Thet thar prison water makes me heave. Oh, fer a drink outer the spring at home! seems like I could drink hit dry."

Old Bigby felt frightened; he was no part of a nurse, and the changed appearance of his son still shocked him.

"Hit looks like good water," said he, "hit does. Try a sup."

But the sick man refused, and his father welcomed the entrance of the jailer.

"Here, Jack," said that official, "my wife's sent you some soup; try and take it."

But the invalid still refused. "I kaint eat hit," he said.

"What do you crave?" asked the jailer.

"Sunshine an' fresh a'r," cried the prisoner, rousing up. "Ef I could only git out whar the sun'd shine on me, an' the mountain a'r would blow on me, an' whar I could git up an' run a mile."

"You should ha' thought of all o' that afore you went to monkeying with the revenue," said the jailer.

"I never thought ez how I'd be cotched," said the prisoner, sullenly.

"But hit does seem hard," said old Bigby, apologetically, "fer a man ter suffer so much—ceenamos' pay with his life fer makin' a few galons o' wild cat liquor likes that."

"The government don't want it," said the jailer, undertaking to explain the revenue system, "but it don't want you to have it, neither."

"Well, now, thet does look cur'ous," said old Bigby. "What kain hit matter ter the gov'ment? En what," he continued, as the jailer was unable to answer that question, "en what's a man to do with his extry crap o' corn when he kaint git hit to market? We uns lives on the side o' old Baldface, en ter haul our crap ter market costs purty nigh ez much ez the crap is wuth. En this year, owin' ter one accident en another, the crap piddled out o' the small een o' the horn. Hit didn't pay ter haul thet leetle bit ter market fer the mite o' money they'd pay fer hit. En we uns war hard up; we had nary sugar nor coffee—jes' bread en a little bite o' meat; en Jack sez, sezzee, 'I hain't agwine ter stend hit, I hain't; I'll jes haul the corn over ter Stillinger's still en turn hit inter bug juice. Hit'll fotch nuff ter buy sugar an' coffee.'

"So he hauled hit over thar ter the still, every bit o' our crap we had to spar, en the stillers stilled hit on sheers. The shotes, they followed Jack, en the rev'nue they followed the shotes en busted up the still, en throwed out the mash en the beer en the whisky en away went our year's crop at a lick. En wusser an all, they cotched Jack. Stillinger he got er way—he's a ole hand at the business—en the rev'nue took en brung Jack ter Atlanty."

"Then you didn't git no sugar nor coffee?" said the jailer, as old Bigby paused.

"Nary drap," said he mournfully, shaking his grizzled head, "en we lost our leetle crap besides. But what's sugar en coffee ter Jack bein' tuck? Me en his ma en the gals wish we uns never heared tell o' sugar en coffee. What's sugar en coffee ter Jack's a lyin' thar a-perishin' away, weaker 'an a baby?" cried the old man in a tremulous voice.

Here the sick man's nerves gave way under the load of self pity, and he began to weep.

"Thar—thar—honey," cried his father, trying to soothe him, "don't ye cry." He thrust his hand into the pocket of his copperas jeans coat and drew out a gaudy red and yellow cotton handkerchief.

"La! La!" he ejaculated, "ef I hain't clean disremembered all 'bout hit! Why, honey, ef hyar hain't anew henkercher yer ma sent me. She saved up all o' ole Speck's algs en sol' 'em Chris'mas, en bayed hit fer ye fer a present, en she's been a-keepin' hit fer ye ever sence."

But the gaudy handkerchief, far from comforting the prisoner, overwhelmed him with home sickness.

"Take hit away!" he sobbed. "Take hit away! Oh, ma! Oh, ma! I'll never see ye agin!"

The stalwart mountaineer dashed the gay handkerchief under the bed, and kneeling beside his son, cradled him in his arms as if he were a baby.

"Thar, now; thar, now; don't ye take hit so ter heart. Ye'll git well en see her yit. Pap'll nuss his boy till he sees her. Don't! don't, my Jackie, my baby! Oh, my Lord!" he moaned in sudden terror at his helplessness to comfort. The unhappy father's tears mingled with his son's, and he vainly strove to dry them in his blue checked handkerchief.

The friendly jailer's eyes filled, and his throat swelled, and fearing he might be swept away in the sea of woe, he hastily retreated to the door, and nearly knocked over the doctor, who was entering.

"What is the matter," said he. "Come, come, this won't do!"

"He won't hush," said the father. "Ef his ma was only hyar ter nuse him he'd do better."

"Well, he must get well and go to her. There's something that will cure him faster than all my medicine," and the doctor held up the paper. "See, the judge has sent you a release," and he read it aloud.

"Yes, yes, you must get well, so you can travel."

"I'll never get well in hyar," said the prisoner, trying to stay his sobs. "All I crave is a leetle sunshine en fresh a'r."

"Well, you shall have it just as soon as you can travel."

"Pap, ye say the sun's a shinin' outside?" said the prisoner.

"Well, hit's a-shinin' right smart," said Mr. Bigby, winking the tears off his eyelashes. "Yes," said he, qualifying, as it were, his assertion, "I mought say hit's a-shinin' right peart."

"En hit's a-gittin' warm, hain't hit?" asked he. "Spring's a-comin', hain't it?"

"Spring's a comin' on," assented Mr. Bigby. "The snow's done melted and gone, the peach trees air a-bloomin', the buds o' the ellums on the willows air a-swellin', the red buds on maples air a-bloomin', the bees air a-playin' in the sun afore the'r gums, en the young calves air a-bleatin' in yander pastur'," he said, adding bit by bit to the rural picture as his son's hungry eyes seemed to devour him. "The jaybirds air beginnin' ter sing, en soon the voice o' the turtle will be heazed in the land," he concluded.

"Then I'll go," said Jack, homesick for a sight of what his father had told him.

"It will be a great risk," said the doctor.

"Well, I'll risk hit. What's the use o' dyin', like a rat in a hole, in this hyer jail?" said the prisoner.

"It is almost certain death to venture," insisted the doctor. "Wait till you get a little better."

"Ef I mus' die, lemme die at home," cried Jack. "'Pears like I could die easier thar."

Seeing that he was determined to go, the doctor ceased to urge him. "Have you the means to take him home?" he asked the father, who had arisen and seated himself on the side of the bunk.

"Well, yes," said the old man, "I sold my critter afore leavin' home ter git the money ter come hyar on."

"If you sold your horse, how are you going to make your crop?" asked the friendly jailer.

"Well," said Mr. Bigby, undaunted by the dismal prospect ahead, "I thought as how I'd sell my cow en calf, arter Jack is well enuff to do thaut the milk, en buy a steer. Only lemme git him back ter his ma in the mountains en we'll scratch 'long somehow."

The sun shone bright and warm; the air was sweet and balmy; spring was coming fast, and April seemed to have hastened along the road to meet March and strewed a few of her days in his calendar. The sun beamed into the car where Jack Bigby lay on two seats, apparently half asleep. For the first half of the journey the excitement, the change, the thought of home, had kept him up.

"The sun—the a'r," he cried, delightedly, "hit's powerful good, pap!"

"Hit's mighty peart," said the old man, sympathetically.

But now, his little strength exhausted, Jack lay in a state of collapse that his father mistook for sleep, with the sun shining full into his face, though he did not seem to know it.

"Wake up, Jackie," said old Bigby, cheerfully. "We air out er Canton now, en gwine in ermong the mountains. Look at 'em."

The sick man roused up, and with his father's assistance raised himself so as to look out of the window. As far as the eye could reach range after range of mountains met the view rising one above the other. The invalid gazed upon them as if he could never get his fill and drank in the mountain air as if it was an elixir.

"Thar, thar, Jackie," said his father; "I'm afeard you'll cotch cole."

"The sight er them is good for sore eyes," said the released prisoner. And language could go no further in his case.

Old Bigby laughed. "What'll ye say when ye see Baldface, en thet thar big pine thet's growd on the tip top er hit war we use ter go a coon huntin'?"

"Ef ever I gets able ter climb up thar, I'll never wanter come down again," said Jack.

Again his father laughed. "Is thet thar ole pine all ye're hankerin' arter, sonny?" he asked.

"In course I wanter see ma and the gals," said the sick man. "When I see ma agin I"—his voice failed him and he broke down.

"There, thar," said the old man hastily, "don't bother 'bout ma en the gals—no' but what they'll hev' er shout en go roun' when they see ye. Lie down en res' now."

He laid his son back on the seat, and Jack wearily closed his eyes and seemed to sleep. Absorbed with his unaccustomed surroundings old Bigby did not notice his heavy breathing, which was deadened by the noise of the train. At last, glancing out the window, familiar objects came in view.

"Jackie," said the old man, "Jackie, wake up, honey. Thar's old Baldface. Look up. En thar's yan pine."

The sick man unclosed his eyes, but they wore a strange look. "I see no pine," he said feebly.

Old Bigby grew frightened. He passed his arms around his son and lifted him by main force; terror gave him strength. "Look, look," he cried anxiously.

But his son's head fell back against his shoulder, the cool mountain breeze played with his hair, the sunshine beamed in his face, but the dying mountaineer saw nothing. In vain his glazing eyes turned toward the distant mountains.

"I kaint see hit," said he feebly, "I'm going fas'. Bury me on top er ole Baldface, pap, yander pine—thar I'll sleep free forever."

His struggling breath ceased. No more his darkening eyes could see the sun for which he so craved. The judge's suspended sentence had availed him naught. Sunshine before a greater judge, the moonshiner was free.—Paul Grant in Atlanta Constitution.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN CLUB.

PROCEEDINGS RELATED BY THE HISTORIAN.

The Lumberman's Song—The Terrible and Unjust Judgment of a Kootenay Chief—Jack's Opinion of What the Indian should do to the White Man.

Jack was standing with his back to the hearth brooding, his old waistcoat hanging open, his hair down over his eyes and the fringes of his skin breeches beginning to crackle with the intense heat. A wild looking figure truly, giving one somehow an idea of open mountain tops and wide plains. The restless look about his bronzed fair face gave a painful impression of one in prison very tired of stone walls. Mackie was playing with the strings of his banjo, just ready to break off into a song. Suddenly Jack looked up all sunny again, and seeing my serious face said, "Well, Mr. Secretary, toothache or colly wobbles? No, I have it—whisky wobbles, a common complaint. Mackie, let's have a song."

At once the chords were struck and the old log walls rang with the melody:

THE LUMBERMAN.

Centuries these woodlands stood,
Looking down on age past;
Strong through evil times and good,
Bowed to man at last.
War upon these ancient glades,
Shaken to each soaring crown.—
A season swing your glancing blades!
Hew the woodlands down!

Chorus—

Lay the ancient woodlands low!
Smoulder in the deathly snow;
Voices calling—
Giants falling—
Lay the woodlands low!

Bended low each haughty crown,
Prone amid the deathly snow,
Hew the ancient woodlands down,
Where the wheat shall grow.
Where man at his labor sings,
There shall mighty cities rise;
Where the axe in triumph rings,
Nations strong and wise.

Lay the ancient woodlands low,
Mighty ships shall ride the wave,
And, whence tides of commerce flow,
Bring wealth home again:
Lands for labor, homes for rest,
Commerce for men's daily need—
Harvests of the timber'd west!
Honest toil the seed!

Lost Creek Jim drew a long whiff from his little black pipe and said, "Damn the Indians anyhow. What's came over them; there's no good in 'em, now—not as much as a color. There's these Kootenays, now. Years ago I was down in Idaho trading, and I came one night on a camp of them, and oh, Lord, it was cold. I concluded to camp. Well, I looked to the horses and then came up to the fire and sat down along side of old Chief What's-his-name. He said nothing nor I either, but he passed the pipe all right, and we took a whiff apiece every now and again, all the evening. Now, I knew the old man's daughter had run away with a young Nez Perce buck, who had a wife of his own, so that she'd no right fooling with him. I was just aching to ask him if she'd came back. But, somehow, I thought it'd be best to let him speak first, cause I knew he felt pretty sore about it. I felt kinder sorry for the old man. Well, the pipe was getting low, and it was quite dark overhead when we heard some one come up very slow on a tame horse, and after a bit the bushes crackled a bit and a woman crawled up to the fire looking quite played out. Then she sat down by the old man's other side and I saw it was his girl come back to him. She nestled up to him and whispered low in his ear, and then the old man drew up stern—terrible hard, and turned on her and drew a revolver and shot her dead. I grabbed him by the arm but it was too late, and when I asked him what he'd done it for he turned away from me and says, says he, "She was a whore!" Well, all night long I lay by the fire, and not a wink of sleep did I get for thinking of the old man and how bad he must have felt when he did a thing like that. But what was worse, in the morning up came the Nez Perce buck to pay for her as his wife, straight and fair. He said his own wife was dead and he had run away with the girl. Now, he was come to get the old man's consent. When the old man heard that, he never said a word, but he just went out to the herd and roped a horse and rode away south and I never seen or heard of him again from that day to this."

"Well," said Mackie, "that must have been a precious long time ago, judging by what they are now."

"As a chap told me, 'quoth the Itinerant Photographer,' if they set out as men it must just have taken ages to corrupt them."

"How many ages has it taken to corrupt you?" said Jack.

"Damn them, anyway," said the Imitation Cowboy, "I'd like to round up every Indian on the range, pound them all in a corral, and introduce a book agent in among them. That'd fix 'em—dead immortel sinch."

"We'll give you the agency old man," said one of the police.

"What have the Indians been doing to you fellows anyway," said Jack.

"Doing, why—

"Excuse me; if I were an Indian," said Jack, "I should spend my sunny youth feeling tenderly around for your scalps, gentlemen. If I caught a photographer levelling with one of those diabolical tripods on me I'd have a bloody massacre, and as for you, Mr. Cowpuncher I fancy I should find it somewhat difficult to distinguish your tail for dust. We go about whiskeying and taking in their women, destroying their hunting grounds, slighting their little dignitaries, teaching them all kinds of strange diseases. If they get desperate and kill a few whites we don't take a month's compensation in cash like they would, but shoot at sight and treat them generally as if they were grey wolves. A man was bragging to me the other day about a trip he had made with United States troops somewhere in the Snake Valley. He said they found the bodies of three whites mutilated by the Indians to show it was an unhealthy locality, then they discovered the retreat of their women and children and old men, up in a pass, slaughtered the whole lot of them in cold blood and then ran away. That's what is called pacifying the Indians, a policy of massacre in time of war and a mixture of pauperism and starvation in time of peace. They are being hunted to death and then we give but every shovetail in the country must needs have his little coyote yelp at their heels. They have got to die out sooner or later, but if I were an Indian I tell you I'd make the game short and merry, and I'd be out on the war path most of the time scalping tender feets and would-be toughs.

"Right you are," said Lost Creek Jim, "give them some more."

The Itinerant Photographer, after his kind, was compounding meanwhile a vile plot to make a picture of Jack, to promise to deliver the order in three days, and then keep him four months in lingering misery and suspense before doing so. The imitation cowboy, after his kind, produced a revolver about a foot long and glared at Jack. Jack blandly observed, "Don't you think that you would be more useful loaded?" The cowboy looked to see! A moment later he observed the shadow above him of a CLUB.

"Lets have a drink," said Jack.

A Warning.

MR. EDITOR.—It is a well-known fact that the majority of people are inclined to look upon a cold in the head as a matter of little importance—involving at the most only a temporary inconvenience. No more disastrous mistake was ever made. The neglected cold in the head is the source of the catarrhal affections with which about seven-tenths of the people of this country are afflicted, and catarrh itself is too often the preliminary stages to consumption and death. The symptoms of catarrh are manifold, but among them may be mentioned, offensive breath; dull, oppressive headache; offensive droppings from the nostrils into the throat and bronchial tubes; deafness or partial deafness; constant hawking and spitting; weak and watery eyes; a hacking cough and feeling of general debility; ringing in the ears and frequent dizziness. These are but a few of the more general symptoms, and those who experience them should loss no time in applying a remedy. Delays are proverbially dangerous, and in the case of this too prevalent disease may lead to death. We offer Nasal Balm to the public as a positive cure for cold in the head and for catarrh in all its forms and stages. Pure Lime Fruit Juice.

What is lime juice? This question is rendered necessary by the prominent attention Lime Juice is attracting as the best temperance beverage. The answer is that it should be the juice of the lime fruit without admixture.

By the "MONTSERRAT" Company alone is the lime fruit cultivated for this purpose, and great care should be taken to obtain this brand (as supplied to the British Government), in lieu of the numerous concoctions sold under the name of Lime Juice Cordials, Prepared Lime Juice, etc.

Sold by all druggists, grocers and at the leading hotels.

THE DOCK

The Times published upon what it supposed good authority the receipts of the graving dock for last year. The Colonist subsequently corrected the Times, not merely as a statement of fact, but as an effort to show that the Province had done wisely in getting rid of a "white elephant." To this the Times rejoined, showing pretty conclusively that the dock instead of being a "white elephant" was not only inseparable from a wise Imperial and Provincial policy, but was proving of immense benefit to Victoria. The organ now agrees with the Times.

The organ now says, "that the work was not constructed as a commercial speculation; that the Province derives all the advantages its leading men ever expected from its construction; that these advantages are very considerable, both to the commerce of the Province and the city of Victoria." Why did not the Colonist admit all this in the first place. The points contained in the above references in the Colonist contain the gist of the argument.

But no. To admit that the dry dock was even a moral success would have been a reflection on Robsonism. Robsonism was not wholly responsible for the bartering away of the dock, but it subscribed to the deal, which is just as bad. Why does not Robsonism admit that it was an error of judgment; that owing to a constitutional inability to see an inch beyond its nose, it agreed to the surrender of a work which would at this juncture prove a valuable asset to the Province. However, since the Colonist admits that the advantages of the dock are very considerable both to the commerce of the Province and to the city of Victoria, we can ask no more. The public will draw its own conclusions, and as usual they will not err seriously.

TARIFF AND BONUSES.

One of the chief difficulties attending politics in the present day, says the Montreal Star, is the extreme perplexity of political questions, the effect of which is to leave much room for honest doubt.

"Think for a moment of the multitude of points at which the Government touches the life of the people through the tariff alone. Think, in our own case, of the rivalries between importers and manfacturers, between the producers of raw materials and the users of raw materials; and then think that these rivalries instead of being left to settle themselves in some open field of competition are regulated, if not conciliated, in the Finance Minister's room at Ottawa. How difficult for even a wise man to determine whether certain tariff legislation is for the advantage of the country or not! How impossible indeed it is to take due account of all its effects, near and remote, present and future! Then take the action of Government in the matter of railway and other subsidies. How many persons can speak with intelligent conviction as to the merits, of a railway policy?"

The remedy, we should suppose, for the perplexities of the tariff lies in the abolishment of it, while in the matter of railway and other subsidies, the principle should not obtain except under extraordinary circumstances. Enterprises which require to be subsidized nowadays may be regarded as of questionable utility. The governments of both Canada and the United States might lay it down as a cardinal principle of their policy that no more subsidies would be granted. "There are those," continues the Star, "who hold that the wide scope given in the present day to governmental action, and the consequent increasing substitution of bureaucratic methods for the free efforts of private individuals is responsible for many evils in our social condition. Certain it is that government does many things that could be done by voluntary effort. Certain it is that it makes of itself a great spending machine, mortgaging the future to meet the needs, or what we are pleased to consider the needs, of the present. Certain it is, too, that nobody seems to know at what point Government interference ought to stop. If an act were brought in to regulate the size and shape of nursing bottles, or to provide that baby-carriages should always have a shade over them, or to prevent people from wearing boots that were too small for them, nobody could be very much surprised, seeing that bills, nearly, if not quite, as meddlesome in their character are already on the statute book."

It will be some time before this wide scope will be narrowed down. Until the idea is got rid of that men can be legislated into the path of virtue sumptuary legislation, or something akin to it, will constantly find its way to the statute books. The spirit that prompted the law against suicide is of the kind which will in time undertake to regulate the size of nursing bottles. But the paternalistic tendency in men will wear itself out after a time. The fact that the abuse of legislation, the "sins of legislators," as HERBERT SPENCER calls them, are being discussed announces the beginning of the end.

THE UNIVERSITY OF BRITISH COLUMBIA.

To-morrow afternoon will show what interest the people of Victoria take in the establishment of the Provincial University in this city. The Mayor has called a meeting to hear the report of the committee of which he was chairman, and to decide what further steps should be taken to further this great enterprise. Is it not time that British Columbia wiped out this stigma that she is the only Province in the Dominion without a university. Is it not time that the bright sons and daughters of our working people should be placed on an equality, so far as educational advantages are concerned, with the wealthier classes. Many a boy and girl with genius has already been lost to the Province through the lack of educational facilities, and it becomes every loyal citizen to do what lies in his power to further the establishment of an institution that will do more for the Province than the establishment of any number of industrial enterprises. It may not indeed contribute so directly to our material wealth but it will encourage talent and develop powers which must tell upon the future power and prosperity of the country. Of course Victoria is the suitable site for the University, but if Victoria is to deserve it she must bestir herself and her citizens must be ready to come forward with such generous gifts as will clearly establish her claims. The meetings last year were neither as large or as enthusiastic as they should have been, though they were representative and influential. We trust the meeting tomorrow afternoon will show that while we may be somewhat slow in moving in such public enterprises, when we do begin to work we mean business. Do not forget the City Hall at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

BAD MARKMANSHIP.

"Target-shooting contests in the Turkish army have developed the fact that not one soldier in twenty could hit a man at twenty paces. A target as big as a barn door placed thirty rods away was missed twenty-nine times where it was hit once. The Turk looks well in red trousers, however."

The Turks, however, are not the only bad shots. Poor markmanship is peculiar to everybody. It is astonishing how really few good offhand shots there are in the world. Thirty yards is only ninety feet, but it takes practice to hit a man off hand with a rifle at that distance. At one hundred yards the deflection of the muzzle of the rifle a quarter of an inch to the right or left leaves an object the size of a man untouched. In actual warfare we should not attach much value to the expert rifle shot, except perhaps, during the progress of a siege. Certainly in line of battle and hotly engaged, it would be a scratch if the condition of his nerves was such as to permit him to do accurate shooting. An eight inch bull's eye at four hundred yards presents a surface no larger than a dot. To hit the bull's eye at this distance requires absolute steadiness and calm weather. At eight hundred yards a bull's eye of this size is invisible and an object the size of a man is as thin as a string. Who is going to hit a man at eight hundred yards off hand? It need not discourage the Turks that they cannot hit a barn door at thirty yards, which is a little singular withal, since at Plevna they proved themselves excellent marksmen.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

General Sir REDVERS BULLER, who succeeds Lord WOLSELEY as adjutant general of the British army, is the officer who was appointed commander of the forces in Ireland a few years ago, and who, after a short study of the condition of the country, reported to the government that the troubles existing in Ireland were due to "bad landlords."

The English papers are filled with letters on the subject of the cession of Heligoland to Germany. One writer contends that this proceeding will render a French blockade of the German coast impracticable, and will thus needlessly disturb the balance of power in Europe by materially altering the conditions of the "big fight" in favor of one of the parties. Another writer, however, points out that England's cession of the island is admitted to be beneficial to France, and that she does well to free herself from such a one-sided neutrality. It is dangerous, he says, even for a power like England,

"To come between the fell incensed points
Of mighty opposites."

The Vancouver World, which supports the Conservative Dominion Government and the hybrid local Government, comes out squarely in favor of independence.

The Premier's sarcastic recommendation that Mr. COTTON turn his attention to educational matters is bringing forth fruit. Mr. COTTON is now moving for the decentralization of schools. In an article on "school expenditures," Mr. COTTON proposes that the school system be reorganized; that "it pass from the hands of the Provincial Government into those of local boards." Somehow, as time passes, it grows painfully evident that the Government, unless prepared to abandon their old line of policy, must give up the ghost. The Province has had enough of paternalism.

The national debt of the United States is now less than a billion. If national debt is undesirable then taxation is justifiable. But who has footed the bills? The consumer. While his pocket has been kept drained that the enormous liability incurred by the war of the rebellion should be made good, the protected gentry have steadily grown richer. It is amusing to hear from CARNEGIE, who has amassed something like $20,000,000 in the last twenty-five years, that "he who desires can purchase shares of almost all the steel concerns at much less than the capital actually invested." Mr. CARNEGIE has a few shares on hand that he will sell himself. From the appearance of things, however, the people of both the United States and Canada two years hence will elect to give free trade a chance.

The Canadian Agricultural Coal and Colonization Company, of which Sir LESTER KATE was the head, has failed. As much might have been expected. In the first place Sir LESTER was the wrong man in the wrong place, and secondly, had he been a thoroughly practical man it is doubtful if he could have managed so cumbersome an enterprise to success. Sir LESTER's first mistake was an attempt to manage the concern as an English enterprise. As things are done in England, you know, he fancied might be profitably imitated in the Northwest. All this involved a private palace car, and how many flunkies heaven only knows. Wastefulness is a feature of every large farm however efficiently conducted, and we may suppose that in transplanting the English system of farming to the Northwest, this natural tendency was considerably augmented. While of course the stockholders in the concern are to be commiserated with, the failure of the concern cannot be regarded a genuine calamity. Gentlemen farming is not what the Northwest wants. The sooner the idea of this variety of farming is exploded the better for any country. It is small farms that pay the best and which gave the country a population of the kind most needed.

Turkey does not relish the continued occupation of Egypt by English troops and has sent a note to SALISBURY demanding that a date be fixed on which the sway of the Sultan shall be restored in the tributary States. From 1879 to 1883 two Controllers-General, appointed by France and England, had considerable powers in the direction of the affairs of the country. In the summer of 1882, in consequence of a military rebellion, England intervened, subdued the rising and restored the authority of the Khedive. France remained passive and the Khedive signed a decree abolishing the joint control. An English financial adviser has since acted as a check on the Government and an army of occupation has remained in Egypt, the force numbering 3300 men on January 1st. France, too, is anxious to see England's grip relaxed, and has repeatedly objected to the occupation of the country being prolonged. ARABI PASHA who was the recognized leader of the revolt which led to England's interference, has since been in exile on the Isle of Ceylon. It is not likely that SALISBURY will readily consent to the demands of the Porte, but will retain possession of the key to India as long as possible.

England may, after all, be compelled to reconquer the Soudan, not with machine guns and bayonets, but with bread. Thousands of people are now being fed by the British at Suakim, on the Red Sea and at Wada Halfa on the Nile, but only the merest fringe of the great mass of the famine stricken are thus reached. It is suggested that Great Britain should seize the opportunity to build railways around the cataracts, thus giving the natives employment and establishing a water and rail route, which once made, could be kept open to Khartoum in spite of any insurrection or rising. Had the Soudanese been let alone in the first place they would have been conquered long before this. The fall of GORDON regretable accident that it was, together with the subsequent massacre of troops sent to subdue the barbarians of the desert was a just retribution for Khedivian missionaryism and meddlesomeness. Nothing will knock out a barbarian sooner than the arts of peace. Coming in contact with the superior civilization, the average barbarian manages to contract all of its vices without absorbing any of its virtues. Conquest then is made easy. Treat the Soudanese with due circumspection and inside of a decade they will have drank themselves into a state of utter desuetude.

EDWARD D. GALLAGHER was hanged at Vancouver, Wash., July 11th. Said the Sheriff to him: "Now GALLAGHER, did you or did you not kill this man?" "None of your damned business," replied GALLAGHER. The trap was then sprung and Mr. GALLAGHER went over to the silent majority.

A PILL FOR OUR WATER COMMISSIONER.

TO THE EDITOR.—Herewith I send you a well developed and lively specimen of leech, which came through my tap this morning in the water. Compared to the large amount of money sunk in waterworks, this is so insignificant as to appear like "straining at a gnat," but when it gets into the glass of water that one is about to drink, he is apt to "swallow a camel." The question naturally arises, on seeing this and other like matter in the water, why does not our little water commissioner busy himself to evolve some scheme for its purification. CONSUMER.

Serious trouble was feared at the steamboat dock by the river undermining the bank and scooping out the bottom so that some of the piles were suspended in the water, making it unsafe to use it with heavy freight. But the energetic work of the railroad in dumping in large quantities of stone, and the fall of the river, have arrested the danger for the present.

A general meeting of the shareholders of the Cariboo Creek Mining Co., whose mines are situated at Illecillewaet, was held at Donald during the week, at which Mr. A. G. M. Spragge was appointed director. By general consent it was decided to resume work upon the mines with redoubled energy.

A severe wind, rain and hail storm passed over Kamloops on Tuesday afternoon, accompanied with loud thunder and vivid lightning flashes. The storm lasted a full half hour and was the most severe over felt here. The hailstones some of them as large as full grown marbles, were blown in drifts two inches or more in depth. Garden stuffs suffered severely. There are no reports from outlying districts at this writing, but it is likely some damage to crops occurred.

Irksome Kindness.

When suffering under certain afflictions, one is likely to become so irritable as to resent sympathy. If people would but ignore our griefs, we feel that it might be possible to bear them with philosophy, but questions have the effect of rousing a demon of opposition. A young lady employed in a public library one day fell from the top of a step ladder, and not only called upon herself the attention of the entire room, but was quite conscious that she presented a forlorn spectacle, ingloriously prostrate and covered with dust.

No one was so ill bred as to laugh, but one after another of her associates rushed up to her, uttering, in fugue and chorus, the natural sympathetic questions:

"How did you fall?"

"Are you hurt?"

"How did it happen?"

"Did you lose your balance?"

In the midst of these queries the victim preserved an unblemished front of courtesy. Finally, however, came a silence, and her would be rescuers were just turning away, when up rushed the janitor, who had just heard of the mishap.

"Why, Miss Smith," cried he, in genuine interest, "did you fall?"

Miss Smith turned upon him one coldly withering glance.

"No, Mr. Green," said she, calmly; "I got down here on the floor, and rubbed my clothes in the dust to amuse myself!"

And then the different workers dispersed to their several occupations.—Youth's Companion.

Imposing on a Queen.

The benevolence of Queen Margherita of Italy is so well known and so spontaneous that not only do the honest poor and suffering among the Roman people frequently appeal to it, but an attempt is now and then made by the undeserving to take advantage of her sympathetic nature.

Not long ago there was at work, not far from Rome, a counterfeiter named Galloni. In the course of his criminal occupation, he counterfeited the notes of the Bank of France, and counterfeited them so completely to his own satisfaction that what seemed to him a happy thought occurred to him.

"I will send one of these to the good hearted queen," he said to himself, "and tell her that I am a poor citizen, who, having some doubts of the genuineness of the note, have resolved to throw myself on her majesty's generosity, and ask her to send me an Italian bank note in exchange for it."

Galloni sent his spurious note to Queen Margherita, with his appealing message. The queen received and read the letter, was touched by it, and enclosed a good Italian bank note to the man in place of it.

But she chanced to show the spurious note to an officer of the royal household, who asked for the letter, and, armed with it and the bank note, the police made a descent upon Galloni's house and captured both the man and his false plates.

It often happens in this way that one wrong deed, added to another, betrays the doer. Since Galloni was wicked enough to commit the crime of counterfeiting, it was not strange that he was also ready to impose upon the generosity of a kind hearted monarch. But it was his second crime which exposed the first.—Youth's Companion.

One Hundred Oysters.

Before oysters were sent from the east to be transplanted in the waters around California, the native bivalve of that country was exceedingly small; it took a great many of the home product to make a satisfactory meal. The story is told of a young lady, a resident of that State, who was stopping at a New York hotel. She wanted some lunch, and told the astonished waiter to bring to her room a hundred oysters. It was not for the waiter to question the taste, or rather the appetite of the young woman, who, of course, had in mind the diminutive bivalves of her native state. The order was soon filled by three waiters, each of whom carried a tray full of oysters, every oyster seeming to the young woman as big as her hand. They seemed to look at her with their horrid white faces and their one diabolical eye until they appeared to her like so many live babies ready to be carved up. They leered at her as if to dare her to come on to the attack. The young woman was afraid to swallow even one of the monsters, and yet she wanted to get rid of them, preferring to be thought by the waiters a glutton rather than a fool. Just outside her window she found a tin water spout with a small hole in it; she enlarged the hole and slid the oysters all down, one by one, they all the time eyeing her with what she described as "a cold, nasty look of malignity."—Harper's Weekly.

WHERE FUR SEALS ARE BORN.

The Pribylov Islands in Behring Sea—How the Seal are Taken.

From Mr. Hall, who was last year in Behring Sea on the schooner Henry Deavis which was overhauled by the cutter Rush about 100 miles east of the Pribylov Islands, J. T. A. Bullitsch writes in the Port Townsend Leader, I learned several interesting particulars.

The latter part of June myriads of seals begin to assemble on the islands, where they breed, and from whence the older seals make daily trips to the adjacent waters for food for their own or any other baby seal, for they are gregarious and very communistic, the young not recognizing parents or parental authority, consequently many of them come to a bad end.

The Pribylov islands consist of the islands of St. Paul, St. George, and Otter island. They lay in a line from north to south. The largest and most northerly, St. Paul, is perhaps a mile long, or nearly round. Directly south one and one half miles is the nearly round rock called Otter island, and not more than two miles south of this is St. George, which is perhaps a mile long and one-fourth mile wide. These islands lay low, are composed of sand principally, with here and there a rocky beech, and on these kelp covered rocky beaches the seals crawl and lay as thick as sardines in a can, making the welkin ring with their roaring and uncouth antics, for the seal on land is the clumsiest of all animals, and always, when in masses, appears to be in fighting humor. The little seals are born, and soon after they clumsily flop to the water, and we may say, after reading President Harrison's last proclamation, enter upon the duties of life with that zeal (seal) an assurance of such protection gives.

Not so the older ones; they have been there before, and leaving their festive progeny to play about the counters of Mr. Blaine's revenue cutters, they climb upon the side of a wave and placing one flipper over their heads, as Mr. Hatts tells us, have one of their number keep a lookout, and rocked thus "in the cradle of the deep," shove away exactly like a man, and continuously during daytime in smooth water. Sometimes they ship with their head under water, at times raising the head (the eyes closed in slumber) for breath. The seal lays all on the surface, and when the sentinel gives alarm silently sinks, without a splash, coming up soon with inquiring eyes to see what was the matter. At night they feed, and then is the time a sensible codfish will make himself as scarce as a policeman at a row. The sealers use shotguns mostly. Occasionally a young seal when wounded, fights viciously, and the old ones are as hard to kill as a poor joke. An average large seal is about eight feet long and will weigh from 300 to 400 pounds. The young, when he takes to the water, is about eighteen inches long, and is so exuberant and happy that he hardly knows what to do with himself, and leads a rollicking life till some poacher comes along and seals his fate.

When on the islands the natives place a fence between the seals and water, then drive them to an open place still further away, and then the slaughter begins, and the luminous, pleading brown eyes look in vain for mercy, for a great corporation wants their coats, and dainty girls, who faint at sight of a mouse, pay a premium for their destruction. The presence of the cutters in the North gives a kind of an air of dignity to those seas, and, possibly, a certain amount of assurance to the seals; but the poacher smiles audibly and gleefully drops his dories and "shoots like the shadow of a ghost on his sleeping victim," which he always tries to shoot in the back of the head and get hold of quickly, for now and then the animal sinks and is lost. Far away a line of smoke appears, the boats are recalled, every stitch of canvas spread, and often before the cutter folks can see them, are safely away, or, if boarded, hide their skins under coal or in some cute way the ordinary cutterman don't know of.

It is expected there will be a good catch this season.

FROM SPIRIT LAND.

Transmission of News from Manitoba to Sweden by Spirit Agency.

The story of what the Winnipeg Free Press describes as a most remarkable spiritualistic occurrence, which possesses the novelty of local interest, comes from Goteburg, Sweden. An English merchant of that place who is somewhat of a spiritualist, having studied the system for personal entertainment and frequently holds private seances at his residence, has written to a Government official in Winnipeg as follows, under date of June 11th:—

"While busy with my letters for the English mail a short time ago, and a young lady, who is the medium at our seances, was writing part of the letters, her thoughts were for a moment or two diverted with something else, and when she turned to her work again she found her hand had written S——n S——g. She called my attention to this and we decided to put the paper aside to see what further would occur in connection with the name. A few days ago we were trying some experiments in photography, when a head of a man appeared in the background and was photographed in the picture we were taking. By writing we were informed that the name of the man who had thus appeared was S—n S—g and that he had lived in S— parish, province of Jemtland, Sweden, up to about 1886, and that he wished us to inform his friends who lived in Jemtland that he was dead. He also stated that he lived in New Stockholm in America, and that he had left a wife and three children.

"As there may be many Stockholms and New Stockholms in America, we are not certain where we are to get necessary information to confirm the above statements, and would ask to make enquiry for us in your country."

The gentleman who received the above letter instituted inquiries more out of curiosity than with any hope of securing the information for which he sought, but judge of his astonishment when he learned from the very first man he asked where he could find S—n S—g, a native of S— in Jemtland, had lived in New Stockholm, the Scandinavian settlement north of Whitewood, Assa, and had died there in April, leaving a wife and three children. As he was dying he called his wife to his side and asked her to write to his friends in Jemtland and tell them of his death. These were the last words he spoke on earth. It was also learned that Mrs. S— has not yet fulfilled the dying request of her husband. She is still living in New Stockholm. The government official has obtained a photograph of the dead man and has written to the Goteburg merchant for a copy of the photograph to which he refers in his letter, so that he may compare them with a view of determining if it really was the spirit of the late S. S—, of New Stockholm that appeared to the merchant at Goteburg. The result will be awaited with intense curiosity. For the present no names will be published, such being the wish of the government official.

More Unions.

During the present week two more labor unions will be organized in Victoria, viz., the stonecutters and tailors, both of which trades are very strong in Victoria. Both unions will be represented in the Victoria trades assembly.

For the Widow.

A check for $17.50 was to-day sent to New York for Mr. H. G. Fox, widow of the late engineer Fox of the Sardonyx. This amount was collected by engineer Shepherd, and is additional to about $50 collected among the steamboat men and already sent on to the widow.

Hardly Probable.

Sealing men say that the report that the schooner Penelope had 1700 sealskins on the 12th of June cannot possibly be correct as it was toward the end of May before she left here for the northern cruise. The number has evidently been greatly exaggerated, and should probably read 170.

Case Postponed.

The case of Lee How vs. Inspector Young, which was to have come up to-day has been postponed until the 21st inst., as the full bench were in session this morning. It is reported in Chinatown that the prosecutor in this case has left the country, and that his whereabouts are unknown at present.

Another Oklahoma.

A recent arrival from Port Angeles says that all the government reserve there is being jumped by parties and buildings erected. It seems that some law has been found where a man can take up two lots in a government townsite and hold them the same as tideland, the holder having prior right.

Firemen's Tournament.

The meeting of the committee appointed to discuss matters in connection with a firemen's tournament proposed to be held here in the fall, adjourned from Saturday evening until to-morrow, Tuesday, evening. It is understood that the James Bay boys have formed a racing hose team and they will compete if the tourhment is given.

Competition is the Life of Trade.

There seems to be opposition to all things, but it was hardly thought that an opposition Salvation Army would spring up. One did spring up, however, in this city on Saturday evening, two men preached, or tried to preach, at Campbell's corner, while their more noisy opponents were beating their drums and tambourines on Salmon's corner. Between the two there was enough noise to drown everything else, but to cap the climax the band commenced to play and then it was about time to leave.

Teachers' Examinations.

Mr. J. N. Muir appeared before the examiners this morning to write on the subject of education should he be required to do so. The Superintendent of of Education kindly informed him that as he had taught in the Province for a number of years the examiners would consider his claims to a certificate without asking him to demonstrate on paper his knowledge of school law. Some think that Mr. Muir is too well posted in school law.

Six university graduates were examined this morning on "School Management." This is the only subject on which graduates are required to write.

Deep-sea Fishing.

The Vesta returned Friday night to Vancouver from Hope Island, the fishing grounds of the Deep-sea Fishing Company, after a very successful trip, says the World. The members of the company who went up supplied the fishing tackle and engaged the Indians to catch the finny tribes. Within six hours after the proper place was reached, the Indians had their canoes full and as many as could be taken care of conveniently—about five tons. The catch was then cleaned, packed in ice and brought down. About one-half will be placed upon the local market and the remainder shipped east. None of the fish caught were extraordinarily large for halibut, but several weighing 100 pounds were taken. This is the third cargo brought down, and the returns are entirely satisfactory.

DECORATION DAY.

The Sermon Preached by Rev. P. Jenns at St. John's Church.

The members of the I. O. O. F. chose yesterday as the day on which they should decorate the graves of the departed brethren, and for weather they could not have chosen a better one. In the morning the members formed a procession at their hall on Douglas street and marched to St. John's church where the pastor, Rev. Percival Jenns, preached a very appropriate sermon.

He chose for his text 1st Cor., xii, 25 and 26. "The members should have the same care one for another." "And whether one member suffer all the members suffer with it; or one member be honored all the members rejoice with it." He said:

I rejoice this morning that I have the double privilege of addressing those whose custom it is to worship in this church, and also our brethren of the noble order of Odd Fellows. The members of the church have come here cognizant of the fact that this day has been set apart, and is known all over the whole dominions of Great Britain as Hospital Sunday, its object being to further one of the great works of our Supreme Master, in ministering to the sick and wounded, who himself the physician of body as well as soul, went about healing all manner of diseases. Our brethren of the noble order of Odd Fellows have joined us to-day, that they may testify by their presence the principles of their order—an order established on the foundation of universal charity, to carry out the work of Him who promises to welcome hereafter, as children of His Father, to the home prepared for them from the foundation of the world, those who, when their brethren hungered fed them, thirsty, gave them drink, strangers, welcomed them in their lodge, naked, clothed them, sick, visited them, and in prison came unto them. Truly blessed is this work, and they only know the real joys of life, who are exercised in it, and are themselves partakers of holy Friendship, Love and Truth.

As one of your own poets has said:

"From these delightful fountains flow
Ambrosial rills of pleasure,
Can man desire, can Heaven bestow
A more resplendant treasure?
Adorn'd with gems so richly bright,
We'll join a constellation,
Where every star with modest light
Shall fill his proper station."

The text which I have chosen, from St. Paul's letter to the Corinthian Church, sets forth the principles of Odd-Fellowship. There were many in the first century, as well as in our own, who joining the Christian church, lost sight of the fact that of all gifts charity is the greatest, and that without it all others are useless. They disputed regarding the excellence of their endowments, and entered those who had the most conspicuous. St. Paul, to show the unreasonableness and evil of this state of things, often drew his illustrations from the human body—that wonderful structure in which a great variety of organs combine to produce symmetry and strength. It was plainly evident that the parts of the body had different offices, equally clear that no one part could dispense with the other, and that the slightest injury inflicted upon one part was an injury inflicted on the whole—the weakest on the strongest and the strongest on the weakest. So argues St Paul, is it with the church composed of many members. Some might seem without honor, but none without use; each had its proper functions. This great fact is recognized by the Odd Fellows' Society. They emphasize the close links between the several classes in the community, and point out how the breaking of any one of these links would go far toward dislocating the whole system. Solomon recognized this when he said, "The King himself is served by the field"—that the throne is connected with the soil, that the lofty occupier of the one is dependent on the tiller of the other. When we reflect upon a great empire like our own; its enormous wealth—its merchants covering the ocean with their fleets—its teachers devoting themselves to the diffusion of knowledge—its men of science, with their lofty investigations—its artificers daily producing a thousand luxuries, etc., we might think little of those who till the land. Yet they are the upholders of this splendid combination, the mainspring of its mighty rotations. The miners who extract our coal, and the food producers are they on whom we are all dependent. Without them how could the armies go forth to war, or men of science unfold the treasures of the earth? If they ceased their work a general harm must follow.

There is no more pitiable spectacle than that of a proud and haughty individual, who looks superciliously and contemptuously on those who occupy stations in life inferior to his own. A land covered with palaces and no cottages would be a land covered with costly sepulchers. Now, this is one great object of Odd Fellowship, it is designed to break down class distinctions, and in doing this, it does a vast and most important work, which is very imperfectly done, if done at all, in our churches. I am sorry to say that people come to our churches, and are always addressed as dear brothers and sisters. Yet they may regularly attend church, and even be partakers of the same Holy Communion and repeat daily their belief in the communion of saints, yet for ten years hardly know the name of the person who sits in an adjoining pew. Now, this with Odd Fellows is impossible, they are brethren in something more than name. They meet in one common hall as friends. If they are sick they can receive substantial relief, not as a mere charity, but as their right. Again, every member of the society is benefitted by being brought in contact with the poor and distressed. The word of God tells us that "the poor shall never cease out of the land." We have here an illustration of wise and benevolent arrangements of Providence, which so eminently distinguish the moral government of this world. A land where there are no poor, yea land where people soon crystalize into repulsive selfishness, a land of all others most undesirable to dwell in, from a moral standpoint, school for Christian graces, a land the most difficult in which to make advances to genuine piety. The more repulsive and most anti-Christian are those who live in utter forgetfulness of others, caring only for themselves. These people soon learn to exaggerate their own infirmities. A mere prick of a pin is thought a mortal wound; every word from their best friends is construed into either a slight or a malicious insult and they soon settle down to talk of nothing but their own wants and supposed infirmities. No joy but in their own advancement and no sorrow but in their own trouble. Therefore those who are in need are our benefactors, and the gratitude they give us is more than compensation. Beautifully does Job express this when he says:

"When the ear heard me, then it blessed me; and when the eye saw me, it gave witness to me; because I delivered the poor that cried, and the fatherless, and him that had none to help him. The blessing of him that was ready to perish came upon me; and I caused the widow's heart to sing for joy. I put on righteousness and it clothed me, my judgment was as a robe and a diadem. I was eyes to the blind and feet to the lame. I was a father to the poor."

Not that the Odd-Fellows aim no higher than that of becoming a moral and alms giving society. They are perfectly satisfied that no institution based merely on moral precepts could ever stand. There must be the life giving support of the religion of Christ as a motive to friendship, love and truth. But some may say why should this society have so singular a name? Why are they Odd Fellows? When Jesus said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive," he was judged an Odd man. The masses of men think it more blessed to receive than to give. The man who receives augments his own stock; he who gives diminishes it. So it appears at first sight. But in reality, he who gives receives. He receives in moral power. A man's wealth does not consist in the abundance of things external to himself. The more a man gives, the more he becomes like to the loving generosity of God. The divine life has relation to continuous bestowal of gifts. Sacrifice is that whereby man becomes likened to God in God's creative, world-preserving energy. The world is given up to self-love. Those who follow a life of self-denial for the good of others are singular. They are indeed Odd Fellows.

Odd was the Apostle Paul, that his judges pronounced mad. To give up home, friends, popularity, reputation, the things coveted by every person, is singular indeed. The old pagans knew something of the beauty of self sacrifice. The Romans referred with pride to the stern old general who, rather than consent to the dishonor of his country, returned of his free will as a captive to Carthage to undergo a death of torture and of shame. They understood the power, the majesty and the wealth of sacrifice.

To do the work of an Odd Fellow, you must attend the couch of the sick and the dying, the side of the suffering and the distressed, the house of the mourning, the graves of the departed, the abode of poverty and of crime, visit the widow and the fatherless in their affliction as well as the lodge room, where social intercourse and fellowship abound.

But it is often said, "Why if Odd-Fellowship be a moral and religious society for men of understanding to take up, why do we have all this flummery about dress; these collars of divers colors, banners, etc.? The same question might be asked of the Builder of the Universe. Why has he made animals and birds of such diverse forms and colors? The gorgeous birds of Paradise, with such fantastic plumage. Why are the leaves of trees of every conceivable shape? In nature, beauty and utility are always combined, so that the color of every bird, and the form of every leaf serves for a particular purpose? So is it with the regalia of Odd-Fellows. Had a vulgar mind observed the great Sir Isaac Newton gazing abstractedly at the falling of an apple he would have thought in himself that "little things serve to amuse little minds." But the great philosopher was dealing with one of the greatest problems in the universe of God. Had that same vulgar mind observed the sage blowing soap bubbles he would have concluded he had fallen into second childhood. Yet, alas, how the world has became enriched by the empty bubbles of soap he blew! I shall conclude this morning by referring to a few of the great truths which this regalia symbolizes. First we have the All-Seeing Eye as the emblem of Omniscience. Every one who enters a lodge is thus reminded that he who made them is not blind to the actions and thoughts of men. That, although to mortal vision "clouds and darkness are round about" the infinite one, yet we know that judgment and justice are the foundations of his throne. That He dwelleth in the light and in Heaven as no darkness at all. "The darkness hideth not from thee."

II. The skull and crossed bones, emblems of mortality. They remind us not merely that we are dust and unto dust must return; but that it is our duty lovingly to commit to the tomb the mortal remains of a departed brother. To cherish his virtues and for ever to bury his imperfections.

III and IV. The three links and axe. The former, the emblem of F. L. T., the all encircling chain of sympathy. That we are one in aim, labor and reward. That if one member suffer, all suffer with it. While the axe is an emblem of pioneering, it reminds us that over this ground the primeval forest stood, the wild beasts roamed and the interlacing branches of trees exclude the light of day. The axe cleared the forest.

V. The heart and hand. The emblem of sincerity, candour and frankness. These are but samples that lead up to higher degrees, and none can dispute their beauty and utility.

The afternoon was devoted to the decoration of the graves of both those who were buried in the old and those in the Ross Bay cemeteries. The majority of the members and their families took carriages at the hall and drove out, while about fifty brethren, each one wearing a badge and carrying in his hand a handsome bouquet, marched in procession to the cemetery. As usual a large number of persons interested in the beautiful ceremony had proceeded them. Following is a list of some of those whose graves were visited:

Any person who can stand on this property and take in the vast and sure possibilities of a rapid rise in prices, and doesn't buy a lot or a dozen lots, is a phenomenon we have not yet discovered.

We started with the intention of selling the whole 300 lots in 60 days, and WE INTEND TO DO IT.

We'll make any reasonable terms. In this case we are working pro bono publico. Our Brokers are

CLOVER VALLEY.

The Crops in Surrey—A Beautiful Harvest in Sight.

"Joaquin" writes us from Clover Valley to the effect that the farmers are looking cheerful by reason of the bountiful crops that are promised. "The hay crop," he says, "promises to be an unusually heavy one, while the valley like a garden is perfumed with roses. Those who wish to see good land should pay Surrey a visit. Of other improvements our correspondent mentions a saw mill lately erected, a feature very much needed. Another feature which is going to prove of immense benefit to farmers is the Westminster Southern Railway, which will make the market of Westminster easy of access and correspondingly stimulate the cultivation of farm produce. The trouble hitherto has been that in attempting to get to market one was liable to get drowned or hopelessly stuck in the mud. 'Had the Government,' says our correspondent, "taken a little more interest in the welfare of the farming population south of the Fraser the country would have developed more rapidly." This seems to be the general complaint all along the line, and on the whole one may well ask where the money has all gone to which for two years past has been appropriated ostensibly for the building of roads and bridges.

BRIEF LOCALS.

The Day's Doings in City and Province Briefly Related.

An agitation for a fire alarm service is being made in Nanaimo.

The Calgary Tribune advertises a horse with "three white hind legs."

A largely attended basket picnic was enjoyed at Langford Plains yesterday by young Victorians.

The amount awarded to Messrs. Sinclair & Tappan by the arbitration court is in the neighborhood of $40,000.

A slumberous drunk who was placidly sleeping on Johnson street was gathered in by the police this afternoon.

London Lancet strongly recommends "Montserrat" Lime-Fruit Juice as an absolutely pure and delicious hot weather drink.

The first consignment of new hay was brought down from Westminster by the Yosemite on Saturday for Messrs. Brackman & Ker.

The Horticultural and Agricultural Society of Nanaimo, will hold their first annual show during the latter part of September next.

There is a scarcity of laboring men and loggers for the camps. Some of the foremen are now in town and unable to engage the help they want.

McGregor & Jeeves have got the front wall of Lenz & Leiser's new block up to the second story. From appearances the building will be a fine one.

The Westminster Truth says that the practice of jumping on and off the cars while in motion, still continues in that city, and suggests that a law to stop the same be made.

Clara Reilly, a girl who a few months ago was locked up at the police cells for safe keeping, this morning laid a charge against a man for assault and battery. The case will come up to-morrow.

Four fine pedigreed horses arrived over by the Islander last evening for local gentlemen who intend to use them as roadsters. They were bought in Montreal by D. B. Gordon, the well known veterinary surgeon and a brother of B. Gordon of this city.

An application was made in the Supreme Court to-day to have the receiver of the estate of Hip Lung & Co., discharged. The application was denied, the Chief Justice deeming it safest to leave the estate in Mr. Monteith's charge for the present.

The salmon run in the Fraser has fallen off very considerably during the last few days, reducing the catch so greatly that lately it had dwindled down to about fifteen fish to a boat. The fishermen, however, are not discouraged, but are quietly waiting for the time when the big run will set in.

Rev. Frank I. Davidson, who was recently visiting for a few weeks with his sister Mrs. C. P. Brown, Winnipeg, died Tuesday morning at the family residence, Neepawa. He had been stationed at Tacoma for a short time. The reverend gentleman had not been in robust health for a number of years, and he was completely prostrated by a cold at the grippe which specedily turned to consumption.

Stationery at Daley's. *

Ice Cream made to order and delivered to all parts of the city. Telephone No. 161. New England Bakery Young Bros., No. 116 and 118 Government street.

Leaves at Three O'clock.

The steamer Yosemite will leave at three o'clock to-morrow morning for Vancouver, instead of at four o'clock, the Islander's time. This change has been made as the Yosemite cannot get over the distance in the quick time of the Islander, and must consequently start earlier on her journey.

Lecture.

Col. Geo. Woodford, who lectured here about a year ago, will deliver a lecture at the Pandora street Methodist church Tuesday evening, July 15, on the subject of Purpose. The lecture is under the auspices of the W.C.T.U. Admission will be free, and a cordial invitation is extended to all. *

Death's Hand.

W. Haughton, a native of Lincolnshire, England, aged 45, and one of the prospectors who came here during the gold excitement of 1862 died of paralysis at the Jubilee Hospital this morning after a short illness. During the early days he was one of the luckiest of miners, but like the rest of that class spent his money as fast as it was earned.

Dunsmuir's Version.

Prior to leaving San Francisco last Saturday, Mr. Alex. Dunsmuir to a Post reporter, stated the demands of their miners were so unreasonable that they could not be granted. He denied the statement that the miners were compelled to work ten hours. The rules of the company compelled three shifts a day, each shift working eight and not ten hours, as erroneously circulated by parties interested in keeping up the strike.

Around the Courts.

One of those complicated Chinese cases was up before the Chief Justice in chambers to-day but was not concluded. Luke Sang, for the Hip Lung company, is trying to make Wang Sing, one of the company, continue in the business but Wong Sing wants to go into another business and consequently he would like to be excused.

The case of Brule vs. Pouliot and Johnson, a text of which was published some time ago, was up before the full court to-day. This was an appeal from the order of Mr. Justice Drake who set aside a deed of trust. The case occupied the attention of the court all day.

Third Batson Song Recital.

Miss Batson, the colored Jenny Lind has been secured to sing for the benefit of the Y.M.C.A. at their rooms on Broad street, between Yates and Fort streets, on Monday evening, July 14, assisted by Prof. Sharpe and other popular talent. Tickets will be only 50 cents. Two hundred and fifty tickets have been placed on sale at Waitt's and 250 seats will positively be provided. As only a limited number of tickets will be sold, those who are wise will secure tickets at once and enjoy the treat of a lifetime, by hearing the greatest colored singer in the world in this her last concert in our city. *

Marriage Bells.

Quite a company of interested and admiring friends assembled at St. Paul's Church, Nanaimo, last Thursday evening to witness the celebration of the nuptials of Mr. Jeffery Planta and Miss Mary Lawrence of this city, who have been so long and favorably known throughout that district. The bride, who arrived under the kind paternal care of Jas. Abrams, Esq., who gave her away, was attended by her bridesmaids, Miss Lilly Planta and her sister Miss Sarah Lawrence. Jack Good was best man, and the bridegroom, who was waiting inside with his father, and other members of the family, led up his fair partner to the altar, where the solemnization of their nuptials was completed, and a brief address delivered by the rector, which was listened to with attentive interest by all present. After the signing of the register, the happy couple drove to the residence of J. F. Planta, Esq., S. M., hard by, where an elegant supper had been prepared. Congratulations and afterwards they left for their pretty new cottage home, lately built on the estate of Mr. H. Rosewall, Comox road, leaving on the Cutch next morning for Vancouver, where they will spend their honeymoon.

Carload of chairs, cots, cribs, desks and general furniture just arrived at J. Hastie & Co's. Government street. *

NAUTICAL NOTES.

Items of Interest Along the Water Front—General Marine News.

The Umatilla left for San Francisco at 11 a. m.

The Louise sailed for the north on Saturday evening.

The steamer Rainbow returned from Bute Inlet last evening.

The steamer Islander was docked this morning and will be thoroughly cleaned.

The bark Wanlock was towed around from Esquimalt yesterday afternoon by the tug Pilot.

The ship Queen Victoria was towed away to-day by the American tug Collis for Tacoma.

The Government snagboat Sampson, which has been on the ways for some time at Westminster, will soon be ready for business again.

The steamer Queen of the Pacific Capt. Carroll, arrived at the ocean dock at 7 o'clock yesterday morning from Alaska and left at 10 for the Sound.

The steam scow Mascotte went down to the wreck of the Barnard Castle today to try and get some coal from the wreck, but it was found impossible to do so, and she returned.

The wrecking steamer Whitlaw came in from the Barnard Castle wreck yesterday afternoon with a load of old iron. Some of the pieces were of very large size and correspondingly hard to handle, but the steam derrick of the Whitlaw laid them carefully on the wharf.

A set of engines for a little steamer for T. W. Patterson & Co., are being built at Spratt & Gray's. The same will be sent forward as soon as complete and placed in the hull, which is now ready for them at the Sicamous. The boat is to be used by Mr. Patterson in connection with the construction of the Shushwap & Okanagan R. R.

The docking of the ship Queen Victoria, under the direction of Mr. E. Kermode, of the Star ship yard, has been mentioned as one of the best jobs of the kind done for some time. The ship was floated on the blocks and the shores put in position without stopping the pumps once, which is considered a fine bit of work, as in most instances it is necessary to stop the pumps, and to even let in more water to enable the vessel to be floated that she can be seated fairly.

CITY POLICE COURT.

(Before Hon. A. N. Richards, Q. C., P. M.)

In the city police court this morning, E. Quincy, a strong, able looking man, was charged by a little girl of eleven years with assault and battery. The girl, who was a bright little one, told her story of how the man had followed her as she was going to Sunday School yesterday afternoon up to Spring Ridge, near the school house, the girl said the man had approached her and took hold of her hand and commenced talking. The lawyers, clerk and police officers occupied the whole morning in arriving at what charge to lay, and the case was proceeded with, the little girl being the only particular witness, and giving the story as told above to his honor. J. P. Walls appeared for the defence and cross-examined the witnesses.

The case was adjourned until to-morrow, bail being allowed, himself in $100 and two sureties of $50 each.

The Chinese assault case was also remanded.

Not Arrived.

A false report was circulated in the streets this afternoon that the Warspite had arrived, but up to the time of going to press she was not in sight. A close watchout is being kept for her on H. M. S. Espiegle, and when she arrives all the ships will salute her.

Due Yesterday.

On Saturday a little stranger came to gladden the hearts of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dee, of this city. It has been suggested that its birthday is synchronous with the celebration of the great Battle of the Boyne, that the Orangemen make a fitting presentation to the youngster.

Slight Fire.

Shortly after one o'clock this afternoon an alarm was turned in at box 31, the cause being a fire on the roof of a block on Yates street, occupied by Richardson, Heathorn & Jones. Mr. C. N. Godson of the firm passed buckets of water to a fireman and the blaze was checked until the arrival of the department, when a couple of streams from the gatchers and a stream from No. 3 soon put out all trace of the infantile fire. The origin of the blaze is one of those mysteries which often occur over fires as no chimney is within thirty feet of the place burned, and there has been no fire in that part of the building for months. The quick time made by the department in getting out was a matter of favorable comment by several strangers.

Found Him Out.

The author of the sensational dispatches about the mythical sealers fitting out with cannons and other gaff of a similar sort, has been discovered. It has been shown on the best of authority that the imaginative itemizer is connected with the Post Tourmond papers, and resides in that city. His false stories have been well contradicted, and his reputation as a muddler of the truth fairly well proven. He can rest assured, however, that he is known by the owners of sealers in this city, and if he should pay a call to Victoria again a championship medal will be presented to him by a host of admirers.

CITY LOTS

—IN THE—

City of Vancouver, B. C.

THE WESTERN TERMINUS OF THE Canadian Pacific Ry.

Under instructions, the undersigned will sell by Auction, on

Wednesday, July 30th

AT 11 O'CLOCK A. M.

—A LARGE NUMBER OF—

CHOICE RESIDENCE

—AND—

FINE BUSINESS LOTS

In that new and beautifully situated portion of the city of Vancouver known as

FAIRVIEW

And being part of Lot 559.

The situation is unsurpassed, being on a gentle slope rising from the waters of English Bay and in the immediate vicinity of the proposed ocean docks.

The property is within easy distance of the handsome new opera house (now in course of erection.) New Post Office, Custom House and other public buildings.

An agreement has been entered into by which the Electric Street Railway will be extended through this property and give regular service as in other parts of the city by September, 1891.

As the Corporation is now negotiating with the Water Works Co., for the purchase of their whole system of water supply it will doubtless be immediately extended to this part of the city.

The rapid growth of this wonderful young city, the western terminus of the C. P. R., with its Unrivalled Harbor, Extensive Lumber Trade, Door and Sash Factories, Sugar Refinery and numerous other industries, together with its Handsome Granite Business blocks and Public buildings, has only to be seen to satisfy the most casual observer that it is destined soon to become a city second in name on the Pacific coast.

In addition to the regular line of steamers now running to China and Japan it is intended shortly to have at least monthly communication between Australia and Vancouver.

The lots will be sold without building conditions, but where approved buildings are erected within one year a rebate of from ten to twenty per cent. will be allowed.

TERMS OF PAYMENT.

One-third cash, one-third in six months, and one-third in twelve months, with interest at 8 per cent. on deferred payments.

CAMERON'S

BID FOR BUSINESS,

ARE YOU WILLING to be confirmed in the belief that you may be wasting your money? Or are you like the old lady who was willing to be convinced, but would like to see the person who could convince her?

TO PAY THE PRICES others ask is simply rank nonsense. It is paying a premium to greediness and emptying your purse to fill pockets bulging with plunder.

THAT OTHER ASK two prices is no reason why you should pay more than one, or that you should suppose that the two price piratical process plan is associated with every business.

WHEN YOU CAN come into our store, handle our goods, compare them in price and quality, and prove to your own satisfaction that we are living up to our claim of low price dealing, why don't you come?

GET LOWER PRICES and save money. That's the idea. You can get them. If no other store offers them our store does. Our war cry is "lower prices." That's our bid for business.

AT OUR STORE you will find as choice a display as you ever looked on. Nothing that belongs to a fine stock is missing—except the usual exorbitant prices. Our prices are very low.
